Editorial Review

Review

«After studying and collating some twenty Latin manuscripts of this important work on Roman military history, Father Stelten has written a fluent translation of this description by Vegetius of the life and times and training of the soldiers of the Roman army who conquered the Mediterranean world. Doctor Stelten proves himself to be a competent Classical scholar. This book is highly recommended for every library and course in military history.» (John P. Kleinz, Professor Emeritus of Philosophy, Pontifical College Josephinum)

«Father Stelten has grappled with the Vegetian idiom and has given us a translation that is easily readable but concise. Classicists and military historians alike will hail his contribution to a text not worked on for over a century.» (Paul Denning, St. Ignatius College Prep)

«This book is highly recommended for every library and course in military history and theory.» (D. Engelberts, Int. militärgeschichtliche Bibliographie)
