Editorial Review

From Publishers Weekly

In the beginning reader Minnie and Moo: The Night Before Christmas by Denys Cazet, the bovine series heroes consult the "Clement Moose" classic ("It's a how-to book on delivering Christmas gifts") when the farmer forgets where he's hidden his grandchildren's presents. Ages 4-8.

From School Library Journal

Kindergarten-Grade 2-When the farmer forgets where he hid his bag of presents, Minnie and Moo spring into action. The two bovines transform themselves into Santa and Mrs. Claus and load up a wheelbarrow for a sled drawn by Rudolph the Red-Nosed Rooster and eight chickens with plastic forks tied to their heads. Quite a lot of funny chaos ensues, all written with beginning readers in mind—that is, clearly and engagingly. With his zippy dialogue and energetic illustrations, Cazet's dry wit shines through in this spoof of Clement C. Moore's poem. Minnie and Moo's many fans will not be disappointed.—S. P.

K-Gr. 2. This I Can Read Book from the Minnie and Moo series begins on Christmas Eve. The two cows discover the farmer's stash of presents, hidden for his grandchildren, and decide to deliver them in the traditional manner. With Minnie dressed as Santa, Moo as Mrs. Claus, and the rooster and chickens disguised as reindeer, they take off for the farmhouse. The animals' good intentions are rewarded when the farmers' grandchildren proclaim the evening "the best Christmas ever!" Rewritten verses from Clement Moore's classic poem are interspersed with the sometimes silly but always pleasing story. Cazet's ink drawings, brightened with colorful washes, create strongly narrative and frequently comical scenes. The pictures of chickens with plastic forks tied to their heads as antlers are worth the price of the book all by themselves. Not your traditional Christmas read-aloud, but good holiday fun for beginning readers. Carolyn Phelan
