Teaching AIDS By Douglas Tonks

Teaching AIDS begins with a discussion of how teachers can create an environment of support for an AIDS education programme. Recognizing that AIDS education must differ for students of different age groups, the author presents tailored, age-appropriate content - what and how teachers should communicate AIDS information to young children, older children and teenage students. Teaching AIDS also addresses actual methods teachers can use to influence their students' attitudes and behaviour by helping them to recognize problem situations in which risks might arise, and presenting them with the actual skills they need to protect themselves in such situations.

Editorial Review

Review

"This small book, full of excellent suggestions, is intended to provide our educators the much needed tools that can be used in the classroom to enlighten these young students about HIV and AIDS. With the information and techniques provided here, individual teachers will have the ability to give their students a background of knowledge that can save their lives from the ravages of this disease...This is a must book for all primary and secondary school teachers. It is well-written, straight-forward, and full of suggestions.

Highly recommended for all libraries."
